Q: PHP: What is the proper way to convert between time and date? I know it has been discussed multiple times. But I'm still struggling to understand how time and date works. So for example... In German we say: "Ich bin 14 Uhr und 10 Minuten wieder am Arbeitsplatz" or just "Ich bin am Arbeitsplatz". It is clear that the datetime is "14 Uhr 10 Min" but in seconds. I know that these represent: 14:00:10 as 14:00 and 10:10 as 14:00 and 10 min and 20 as 10:00 and 20 minutes But what does 14:00:10/20/2014 mean? I couldn't understand in what format a time like this is, although I know it should be a string. A: Here's a table showing the notations you refer to. To convert, i.e. to obtain the equivalent in German, it might help to know that the 24-hour clock is used in Germany instead of the 12-hour clock. Thus, an example of the time-and-date notation: 10:10:20 on 01.01.2013 can be written as 10:10 20.01.2013 So, in 14:00:10/20/2014 the /20/2014 is a fraction of a second, in other words, 14:00:10 22.01.2014 and the last part of the "date" is a day-of-month, which means 14:00 10th of January 2014. A: In Germany we use a 24 hour clock in which the hours run from 0 to 23 and the minute runs from 0 to 59 (and 0 to 59 if it's a decimal hour). If you want to see all that at work, visit When converting to other countries, hours run from 0 to 23 and minutes run from 0 to 59 (there is no minute at the end!). How to represent this in a formated date? So, 14:00:10 is the time, the minutes of that hour, to two decimal places (which of

Q: input type=file does not work in.innerHTML $(document).ready(function() { $('input[type=file]').change(function() { var t = $(this).val(); var file = new FormData($('input[type=file]')[0]); file.append('photo', t); $.ajax({ type: "POST", url: "Photo.php", data: file, processData: false, contentType: false success: function(response){ document.getElementById('divPhoto').innerHTML = response; } }); }); }); and I am using jquery 1.3.2 and I am trying to use input type=file for an image upload onChange. I need to do this in this order. The html of the div is next to the.js file The problem is I am getting an object is undefined error in the firebug console. The error occurs when the code attempts to append the file to the FormData object, but I am unsure what I am doing wrong. A: try this one $(document).ready(function() { $('input[type=file]').change(function() { var t = $(
