The present invention relates to a two-position rotation detector, particularly of the type comprising a permanent magnet with a pole pair and a pickup movable in relation to the magnet over a predetermined movement path and having a permanent magnetic circuit with a free air gap in which the magnet is arranged on one side, the pole pair facing the magnet on the other side. Two-position rotation detectors of the aforementioned type are known in the prior art. A usual feature is that the pickup is fixedly joined to the magnet and consists of two freely exchangeable plates on which an electric coil is mounted and the free air gap can be bridged by a contact surface when the pole pair is rotated, the plate which is connected to the magnet being correspondingly pivoted. A two-position rotation detector of the aforementioned type is disclosed in German Patent No. 29 01 964. In the known rotation detector, the magnet has a hub with two faces which are flat in cross section and which can be secured to the pickup plates on the basis of a clamping and/or frictional engagement. The magnet here has additionally a circumferential surface by means of which it can be slipped onto a retaining ring. The magnet can thereby be installed by inserting the retaining ring. In this case the magnet is also brought into contact with the pickup plates by means of a clamping and/or frictional
